The Best College Bookstore In the World

You know how in all the literature Kenyon sent you when you were still trying to decide if you wanted to come here, the prospectus listed the average number of times a Kenyon student was in the bookstore a day as 7? And, of course, it bragged that Kenyon's bookstore was ranked (surely by some obscure publication) the best college bookstore in the world? 7? I marvelled, skeptically. The best in the world? I asked suspiciously.

I suspect that the bookstore rivals other bookstores for the best in the world only because of the existence of my (dwindling, I'm afraid) bookstore account, and its astonishing array of magazines. You can read them, crumple their pages, slop coffee on them, without paying for anything. But do I go there seven times a day?

Bookstore visits are oddly habit-forming, though. You go there expecting to get all your reading done because it's such a comfortable, brightly lit atmosphere that smells good and has food (unlike your room) and end up reading all about Ricky Martin in Rolling Stone or something and realize that you'll have to return to the bookstore to do more work after dinner.

One table catty-corner from me was always bathed in a beautiful golden light and was always taken by someone with a water bottle, and lots of books and reading to do.

We thought it would be nice to get the lives of ordinary people (normal joes, you know) into your yearbook. Unfortunately, we couldn't get any janes in. We do apologize. But without further ado, please enjoy ...

A Day in the Life of John Green

9:06 The alarm, which my roommate tells me is so loud as to hurt his feelings, goes off. I make a deft, cat-like move and nail the snooze button with all the precision of an eagle diving for a fish.

9:15 See 9:06.

9:24 Ditto.

9:33 The roommate informs me that the alarm has gone off for the last time. I get out of bed, put on socks, shoes, and a baseball cap. I grab my wallet, my keys, and brush my teeth.

9:43 I drive from Bexley lot to the Bookstore. Bagel and Gatorade, courtesy of Mom and Pops. I eat as I walk to Ascension.

9:51 The vax is slow, but I love it. I can't even comprehend this new webmail business. Do we kill manatees just because they are fat, slow, and stupid? Of course not. And we shouldn't be killing the vax.

9:57 Several emails from recent Kenyon graduates, each with horror stories about the Real World. They are exaggerated, I'm sure, to scare me. It's working.

11:10 Class.

11:36 I realize that I can't watch any Cable TV today. TV is bad for my soul.

12:14 Walking down Middle Path with a friend, we discuss the possibility of growing beards until graduation.

12:35 I fight the urge to watch cable for a full minute before turning to Comedy Central.

1:21 I have been trying to register for the GRE for almost an hour. If the test itself is anywhere near as difficult as the registration process, I'm in a world of trouble.

1:40 I give up studying and decide to socialize.

2:10 Class. In a word, unbearable. The kid sitting next to me writes one sentence during the entire fifty minute lecture: "I just want to run away and never come back."

Dan Torday and John Green discussing facial hair on Middle Path

Bexley lot

3:00 I leave class with high hopes that I will see The Girl, but alas, she is nowhere to be found. I walk home with Professor Olshanskaya, once a Russian teacher, who is good enough to laugh at my jokes and tell me I ought to quit smoking.

3:20 I bother my roommate as he tries to study. I read a bit myself, but find myself suddenly and inexplicably quite tired.

3:45 I fall asleep in the hammock outside my apartment.

4:48 I wake up to a phone call from The Girl. I swoon, etc.

6:00 After reading for an hour, and now it's time for the 1033 meeting.

John Green in his hammock

10:00 As much as I love my friends, I'm out of cigarettes, so I head to the Market and make a three dollar credit card purchase. Can you do that in the Real World?

10:42 I'm "finished with my homework" unless you count the Chinese Religions paper that was due three days ago, which I have no intention of writing. I am hungry, but I have no money or food. So I smoke.

10:49 Still hungry ... I have a credit card.

11:07 Kroger. Roommate and I buy bacon, eggs, pancakes, hamburgers, cookies, etc.

11:22 I very nearly hit a deer driving back from Kroger, but I miss it, saving the car from thousands of dollars of repairs. I am exhilarated, pumping my fist and so on.

11:45 Back at home, the phone rings. It is The Girl. I swoon, etc.

12:07 The Girl comes over. I feel giddy, but entirely unattached. I believe that I am in the perfect relationship. I seem to remember thinking that before, and having been dead wrong, but I'm sure that I'm right this time.

12:30 Several girls and several roommates watch a movie.

2:15 It's late. I walk The Girl home, and then walk back to the apartment.

Gambier at night is subtly beautiful. I feel a good sort of tired, even though I haven't done much productive today. I take off the shoes and baseball hat and get into bed. I am fortunate to fall asleep quickly.

9:06 Alarm goes off. I hit the snooze button without ever opening my eyes.

John Green and his computer

Colin Yuckman and Michael Davis, members of 1033, performing for John Green

7:15 I love family-oriented sketch comedy. I take a friend in the group out to dinner.

8:45 The friend and I have been chatting about love and loss (is there anything else worth talking about?) for more than an hour when the manager says that we should probably order some more food or leave.

9:15 Back at school, I desperately need to work, or at least feel the comfortable walls of my apartment, but I sit in an Adirondack chair and talk with some friends. I am running low on cigarettes.

"Our deepest fear is not that we are inadequate; our deepest fear is that we are powerful beyond all measure. It is our light, not our darkness, that most frightens us. We ask ourselves, 'Who am I to be brilliant, gorgeous, talented and fabulous?' Actually, who are you not to be? You are a child of God, your playing small doesn't serve the world. There's nothing enlightened about shrinking so others won't feel insecure around you. We were born to make manifest the glory of God that is within us. It's not just in some of us; it's in everyone. And as we let our own light shine, we unconsciously give others the permission to do the same. As we are liberated from our own fear, our presence automatically liberates others."

Come, my friends,
 'Tis not too late to seek a newer world.
 Tho' much is taken, much abides; and tho'
 We are not now that strength which in old days
 Moved Earth and heaven, that which we are,
 we are;
 One equal temper of heroic hearts,
 Made weak by time and fate, but strong in will
 To strive, to seek, to find, and not to yield.
